BRITAIN, DESERTED BY ALLIES AND THREATENED FROM WITHIN, MUST DEFEND TURKISH STRAITS

French And Italian Troops Will Be Withdrawn From Neutral Zone—Laborites In England Warn Cabinet Against Any War Moves—Belligerent Attitude Of London Is Materially Ameliorated By Developments

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The British cabinet today decided not to declare war against Turkey unless the Turkish Nationalist army under Mustapha Kemal Pasha invades the "neutral zone" along the Turkish straits—the frontier of Europe and Asia. This was a revision of policy and a concession to Britain's European allies.

Following a meeting of the cabinet today it was reported that Great Britain had reaffirmed her policy to defend the Turkish straits to prevent the Turks from entering Europe even if she had to act alone. Despite the laborites' tremendous opposition to war, Britain continues military preparations. News that the French and Italians would withdraw their troops from the neutral zone on the sea of Marmara and the Bosphorus, came as a thunderbolt. One of the objects of Lord Curzon's visit to Paris will be to attempt to have France modify this decision to leave a fair sized force of soldiers on duty.

British soldiers on leave are being recalled to their units, it was reported today.

According to the Evening News the cabinet is "re-considering its warlike moves of last week and is taking a more sober attitude."

The friction between the allies, it is feared here, will encourage the Turks and may react in favor of the Russians, who have a treaty of alliance with the Ankara government.

The decision of Italy to withdraw her troops, leaving only a few warships in the straits, was understood to have resulted from fears that the Turkish Nationalists would attack the Italian mandated zone on the Mediterranean littoral.

The campaign of labor and the press against another war, continues in full swing.

The laborites will hold a mass meeting tomorrow to draw up resolutions (Continued on Page Five)

AGED MOTHER TO BE STAR WITNESS FOR BRYSON'S DEFENSE

COURTHOUSE, HUNTINGTON, Pa., Sept. 19.—A courtroom with the country folk of Huntington today witnessed the start of the drama of clandestine love in which Dr. Herbert Bryson, former physician of Washington, is fighting to escape the electric chair. He is on trial for the murder of Mrs. Helen Irene Haynes, who was shot to death at Cassville last April in the house where she had lived with Bryson for more than a year.

Mrs. Elizabeth Bryson, 71, of Washington, sat in the dignified high-ceilinged courtroom, where Judge Bailey and a jury will weigh the evidence upon which is based a charge of murder against Dr. Herbert Bryson, her son, and fought in the myriad ways that only a mother knows, for the life of her boy. "They will never convict my boy of this murder," the mother said. "I can't forsake him now."

The attorneys for Bryson, the Washington doctor, who is accused of the slaying of Mrs. Helen Irene Haynes, his unlawful mate, at Cassville, August 8, last, makes no secret of the fact that they regard Mrs. Bryson as their "trump card."

The element of human appeal upon which the outcome of criminal trials so often depend will be presented by the mother.

ONE NEW CITIZEN, MADE TUESDAY, TO BECOME DEMOCRAT

Of three applicants for naturalization papers who were examined at the courthouse Tuesday morning, Eugene Zamon was the only successful one.

The other two failed because of insufficient knowledge of the American form of government.

Zamon is a native of Carnegione, Italy. When he was given his certificate of naturalization by Miss Edith Burrell, assistant clerk of courts, he declared that he was going to become a Democrat, so he could vote for her, when she comes up for election as clerk of court.

The next examination of applicants for citizenship papers will be held the Monday following the third Tuesday in March, 1923.

MUSIC BIG AID IN SCHOOLS, VIEW

U. S. Educational Commissioner Says Appreciation of Masters Valuable

SAYS TEACH ALL TO SING

Besides Aesthetic Influence It Aids Deep Breathing and Body Growth

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—With the probable exception of the "Three Rs," music is of greater practical value than any other subject taught in the schools of America, in the opinion of Dr. John T. Tigert, of the United States Commission of Education.

"The value of music in our schools can hardly be overestimated," Dr. Tigert said. "That this is becoming more generally recognized is evidenced by the fact that music is now being taught in most of our schools by highly specialized teachers. Its place in the school curriculum is now almost (Continued on Page Ten)

WILLIAM E. SCHOTT DIES AT HOSPITAL MONDAY NIGHT 8:10

After being confined to the city hospital in a critical condition since last Thursday, following an operation for the removal of his appendix, William E. Schott, aged 56, south Second-st., died at the hospital Monday night at 8:10 from peritonitis.

Mr. Schott was attacked with appendicitis at his home last Tuesday. Owing to the seriousness of his condition he was removed to the City hospital Thursday, where he was operated upon that afternoon.

Peritonitis had set in several hours previous to the operation Mr. Schott underwent Thursday. Following the operation when it was learned by the attending physicians that Mr. Schott had peritonitis, they practically gave up all hopes for his recovery.

For the past seven years he was associated with the Ohio Securities Co., of Newark, O., as district manager salesman. He was traveling representative for a wholesale grocery house in Zanesville for some time. He followed salesmanship during his entire business career.

Mr. Schott was born on October 4, 1866 at Winesburg, O. He left that city for Millersburg at the age of 21 years. He remained in Millersburg up until 12 years ago when he came to Coshocton to make his home.

Mr. Schott was married to Miss Cora D. Heffelfinger on September 12, 1894.

He was a Christian all his life. He became affiliated with the local Presbyterian church a number of years ago. Mr. Schott was one of Coshocton's esteemed citizens.

For a number of years, he was a member of the Masonic lodge of this city. He was also a member of the United Commercial Travelers, belonging to Mansfield Council No. 13.

Besides the widow, one son, Hubert E. Schott, of Akron, and three brothers, George M. Schott, of Columbus; Charles and Henry Schott, of Winesburg, O., survive.

The funeral arrangements will be completed as soon as communication is established with the son who is on a motor trip in the east.

Interment will be made in Millersburg.

Appendix Removed

Charles Cooper, of 224 Hamilton-st., underwent an operation at the City hospital Tues. for the removal of his appendix. The operation was performed by Dr. Jesse McClain, Dr. F. M. Marshall and Dr. T. W. Lear.

While confined at Mayo hospital at Rochester, Minn., at the Mayo Clinics, three months ago his appendical region was drained on account of an abscess upon the appendix.

Barber Shops Are Bobber Shops Now

Barber shop or 'bobber shop'—it's all the same.

So many women and girls are regular customers of the local tonsorial parlors that the small boy's vernacular is fitting.

Male patrons are wising up to the fact that immediately after school hours is a poor time to seek the service of the favorite chin scraper.

At that hour most of the local shops are thronged with school girls seeking a trim or a bob.

CHEAP LOVE FLOODS BERLIN'S 'MARKET'

Foreigners, Due to Exchange Ratio, Get 'Companions' at Small Cost

BERLIN, Sept. 19.—Foreigners touring in Germany, and especially in Berlin, are now the favorite objects of cheap "love at first sight" on account of their high exchange, and very often fall an easy prey to unscrupulous demimondaines.

District police stations almost every day are the scenes of tragicomedies performed by foreigners reporting and complaining about the loss of jewelry and cash after a pleasure trip in fashionable restaurants and bars ending in a tete-a-tete in some obscure hotel.

While studying the social and economic conditions of Germany in such a peculiar way a Swede recently had stolen from him some 700 kronen, or 200,000 marks, which his girl friend immediately "invested" in goods, namely costly robes, two hats and lingerie. She was hunted up by the police and found unconscious from sniffling cocaine together with other friends, and the Swede was given back his 60,000 marks in cash and the recaptured outfit of the girl.

German papers from time to time contain odd advertisements in the "wanted" columns. The following represents a significant example:

"French industrial, shortly Berlin, wants young woman secretary, 15-25 years old, intelligent, representative, able take French dictations phone, thorough knowledge French not required, highest salary, etc."

A Berlin paper commenting on it writes: "We wish to God this foreigner finds his match."

SENATE WILL TAKE TARIFF VOTE TODAY

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—The new Republican tariff bill came to the end of its long legislative journey through congress today with the senate ready to vote at four o'clock this afternoon on its final enactment.

Under a unanimous consent agreement, the senate will vote at that hour on the measure as revised in conference and its passage is assured. The bill then goes to the white house to become a law by the president's signature.

With its final passage pending, the bill has survived twenty months of bitter partisan attacks in congress and carries into law the highest protective duties since the administration of President Grant. Its pathway after enactment will be beset with additional troubles, for leaders of both parties admit it will be tossed into the political maelstrom of the November elections as one of the chief party issues. When the president signs the bill it will formally displace the existing emergency tariff act and the permanent Simmons-Underwood law.

Court Is Adjourned With Radio Message

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—While Supreme Court Justice Arthur S. Thompson of Rockland-co., was enroute to this port from a trip to Europe he decided to adjourn court. He simply sent a radio message.

VETO MESSAGE IS DUE TODAY

Harding Has Prepared Vigorous Denouncement Of Soldier Bonus MEASURE LOST

Absence Of Many Pro-Bonus Votes Certain To Defeat Bill

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Altho the white house maintained strict silence today as to President Harding's probable action on the soldiers' bonus bill, the expectation prevailed in congressional quarters that a veto message would be forthcoming before midnight.

The president's message is understood to be virtually completed. It is described by those who have had a hand in its framing as being a "vigorous" denouncement, reviewing the history of the bonus, and calling particular attention to the fact that in rejecting the measure the chief activity is only carrying out the policy he outlined months ago of refusing to accept any legislation that did not carry with it the means of providing the (Continued on Page Five)

STATE'S WITNESS IN WARSAW CASE TELLS JURY ABOUT CRIME

For one solid hour Tuesday morning, Lois Wilson, 15, daughter of John H. Wilson, of the Warsaw vicinity was questioned and cross questioned before the common pleas court, in an effort to clear up the story of an alleged criminal assault upon her by her school teacher, Earl Clark, of Warsaw.

Called at first, the little girl soon became embarrassed and nervous under the questioning of Prosecutor Lloyd S. Leech, and the rapid cross-questioning of T. H. Wheeler for the defense, and it was with difficulty that the complete details of her story were gotten from her.

Under the questioning of the prosecutor she told that she and her younger brother George had started walking home from school with their teacher, Earl Clark. Half way home the boy took another road for a different destination, and the teacher and girl proceeded in the direction of Warsaw. Twice Clark invited the girl to leave the road and go into the woods, she told, but she refused.

When they reached the Wilson home, from which the parents were absent, the teacher and the girl went to the barn to search for eggs. As they stepped inside the barn, the teacher closed the door and grabbed the girl, forcing her against a manger, she told the jury.

The remainder of her story was told falteringly and in a low voice, but left the impression that the alleged crime for which the teacher was indicted by the grand jury, had been committed in the barn.

Four witnesses, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Wilson, George Wilson and Lois Wilson have been subpoenaed for the prosecution, and eight for the defense. For the defense there are Dr. J. E. Hahn, F. E. Whittemore, Glen Darling, William Coffman, L. C. Shaw, John Foster, Dr. John Honabarger, Lloyd Coffman.

The defendant, Clark, was accompanied by his wife, in the courtroom during the trial Tuesday.

LIFELESS BODIES OF 47 MINERS, SMOTHERED THREE WEEKS AGO IN ARGONAUT FIRE, BROT OUT TODAY

Entombed Men in Gold Mine At Jackson Died Within Five Hours After Fire Broke Out—Notes Scrawled As Death Sleep Settled Tell Story—Hastily Built Bulkheads Failed To Keep Off Deadly Gas

NEW MEXICAN WOMAN IN CONGRESS RACE

JACKSON, Calif., Sept. 19.—The golden crypt of the Argonaut gave up its dead today in the same silent manner that the lives of forty seven miners were snuffed out three weeks ago.

The work of bringing up the bodies of the forty seven miners found dead last night behind hastily constructed bulkheads began early today. All persons were ordered off the Kennedy mine thru which the Argonaut disgorged from its gold lined depths the remains of its victims.

Gas conditions were reported to have delayed the work of securing the bodies and the possibility existed that all might not be brot to the surface until tonight.

It was reported some officials favored holding all of the bodies underground until they could be brot up tonight.

Definite burial plans have not been announced, altho it is understood that interment will be handled by the mining company under the jurisdiction of the state authorities.

The possibility of both state and federal investigation of the disaster loomed today with the receipt by B. O. Pickard, head of the United States Bureau of Mines Rescue crew, of a telegram from Dr. H. Foster Bain, director of the United States Bureau of Mines, in which he declared the safety codes prescribed by the laws of many states are inadequate. Clarence Jarvis, representing Governor W. D. Stephens, had already announced there would be a thoro-state probe following completion of the rescue work.

Coffins were taken below in which to bring up the bodies. All the dead were found behind two bulkheads which the entombed men had constructed in a vain effort to save themselves. The bodies were decomposed so as to make identification difficult.

Not one of the 47 men had remained alive after the first few hours of the fire which broke out in the Argonaut shaft at midnight on August 27. They were driven from passage to passage by the deadly fumes of gas and finally made a last stand on the (Continued on Page Ten)

ASHBROOK SPEAKS TO DEMOCRATS IN MEETING MONDAY

Democrats here were swinging into action Tuesday following a meeting of precinct chairmen held in the Democratic headquarters Monday evening.

A number of women attended the meeting.

Interest is high here, according to the statement made Tuesday by Samuel J. Cardwell, chairman, who presided at the meeting Monday evening.

William A. Ashbrook, candidate for congress from this district, addressed the meeting Monday evening.

He paid a glowing tribute to Senator Altee Pomeroy and took occasion to compliment Coshocton-co Democrats for their activity and enthusiasm.

RAYMOND YOUNG IS GIVEN WORKHOUSE SENTENCE TUESDAY

A sentence of four months in the Canton workhouse was handed to Raymond Young by Judge James Glenn Tuesday afternoon, when the common pleas court jury declared Young to be guilty of assault and battery.

Young was indicted for criminally assaulting Hanna Franklin.

The papers committing him to the workhouse had not been made out Tuesday and it was not known exactly when he would start serving his sentence.

Bids Opened For Heating Contracts

Bids for the contract of installing separate furnaces in the county jail building and the county courthouse were opened by the county commissioners Monday, but the award has not been made.

There are several bidders for the contract. It was stated Tuesday by the commissioners, that the contract would probably be awarded by Wednesday noon.

Mrs. Adeline Otero Warren, member of a prominent Sante Fe (N. M.) family, has won the Republican nomination for Congress. She is the third woman to win such a nomination from the G. O. P. this year. Active in politics for years, Mrs. Warren was first identified with educational work, serving as State Superintendent of Education. Later she became identified with the State Health Board and was one-time chairman of the Women's Division of the Republican State Committee.

COMMUNITY SERVICE INSTITUTE TO OPEN IN GRACE M. E. GYM

Announcement is made by Judge Milo C. Ely, chairman of the Community Service committee, that the same leaders institute will have its opening session tonight, in the gymnasium of the Methodist Episcopal church, instead of in the library, as formerly announced.

The number of registrations has been such that the larger room has become necessary.

Judge Ely advises that everyone interested in this course make plans to attend every session, beginning tonight by being on hand a little before eight o'clock.

"Just talking about play," said the judge in an interview Tuesday morning, "doesn't begin to tell the story of Community Service. We mustn't forget the educational opportunities in community music and drama and the development of a constructive interest in civic building thru neighborhood groups."

"But every movement must have a beginning and we are starting out with game leadership which will emphasize the principles applied in every other department of the work."

"Possibly the greatest business asset which one can develop in himself is resourcefulness, and this is one of the sure results of group games. J. Leonard Mason, formerly superintendent of recreation in Philadelphia, Pa., points this out in the last number of 'Strength' magazine. Mason says that awkwardness and poor judgment in getting out of harm's way can only be remedied by games which demand quickness of thought and action. Those who do not like to play are often the ones that need to play the most. Slowness of thought and physical action can be most easily overcome by the speed and agility learned in games."

The committee that has charge of the institute is as follows: Mayor W. S. Tish, chairman; Mrs. J. S. Elliott, churches; Russell Karr, and S. G. Cardwell, fraternal orders; Otto Bries, industrial organizations; Miss Veronica Hanley, civic and social clubs; O. B. Clifton, schools; Judge Milo C. Ely, publicity.

Syrup Pepsin Loved By Hosts of Babies

Half a teaspoonful will make a fretful youngster happy and playful

THE mother has her choice of many remedies for her baby's minor ills, but she should be careful which remedy she selects lest she do the child harm. What might be safe for herself may do injury to an infant.

You will find that if the little one cries and doesn't want to play that its bowels are constipated. First look carefully to the diet and give the child one-half teaspoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. You will then see results in a few hours. You will not have to force it on babies or children; they actually ask for it, it is so pleasant-tasting and free from griping.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a compound of Egyptian senna and pepsin with agreeable aromatics. The ingredients are stated on the package. It is a mild, gentle vegetable laxative that everyone finds effective and pleasant. It is better for you and yours than purgatives, coal-tar drugs, or salt

Use a safe laxative like Syrup Pepsin, and especially for the children, for invalids, growing girls, nursing mothers, elderly people, and persons recently operated upon who need bowel action with the least strain. IRISH ARMY IS CALLED THE MOST LOVABLE

Infant in Personnel and Age, Writes Correspondent of Free State
Force

HAS SEEN REAL WARFARE

Friendly, Not Familiar,
Men Call Officers by
First Names

DUBLIN, Sept. 19.—The most lovable army in the whole world is the Irish Free State Army.

The Irish Free State Army is just an infant army, both in personnel and in age. The soldiers of the army are mere boys—carefree boys, whose blue eyes snap and whose lips are ever parted in smiles.

Tho in existence less than a year this infant army has seen real warfare and has been whipped into an efficient fighting force. It is different from any other army in the world—it wouldn't be Irish if it weren't. The Irish temperament is peculiar and perhaps that is why the private soldiers of this army are often heard to address their officers as "Dick" and "Jim"—and it seems that in this instance familiarity does not breed contempt.

SMARTLY GARBED

The Irish Army is smartly garbed and presents a soldierly appearance, with neat olive-green uniforms, black caps, shiny leather puttees and brass buttons—oh, such shiny brass buttons!

No one can doubt the courage of this Irish Army—courage stands out all over the army individually and collectively, and men who nightly must cope with unseen enemies fighting from housetops and throwing bombs from behind stone walls must be men of courage. The average age of this army is probably less than twenty-one.

FIGHTS FOR IDEAL

Here is an army fighting for an ideal, it would seem. Certainly it is not an army fighting for pay, for the pay is small. Private soldiers draw about fifty cents a day, and generals draw about twenty-five dollars a week. Once again the wisdom of the leaders crops out, for the Irish appetite is recognized. The army is well fed, its ration being more than adequate, and Irish boys do love to eat.

Courtesy is another virtue of the Irish Army. There is a boyish shyness about the army that replaces the smirking boisterousness of the most of the world's soldiery. One never gets a discourteous word from an Irish soldier.

Altogether this Irish Army is a credit to Ireland and a monument to the memory of Michael Collins. It's a most lovable little army, and judging from the number of colleens who may be seen hanging on the arms of off-duty soldiers, it is a lovable army well loved. No one can blame the girls either.

Mildewed Clover Not Harmful

The widespread occurrence of powdery mildew in clover this year has worried many stockmen as to whether or not it might be poisonous to livestock. A recent test at the Ohio Experiment Station indicates that this particular fungus is harmless. Mildewed clover in both the hay and the green state was fed to guinea pigs for two weeks with no bad results whatever. These small laboratory animals are known to be highly sensitive to any poisonous matter in their diet. These results agree with those obtained at the Tennessee Experiment Station where horses, cattle, sheep and swine were fed mildewed clover for two weeks with no ill effects. If hay is very dusty from the spores of this fungus, it should be moistened if fed to horses.

SAFE CRACKER, 86, TO TRY IT AGAIN

Jailed for Forgery, Regrets Trying Somebody Else's Game, He Says

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 19.—"I'm eighty-six, but I'm not through opening safes yet."

Such is the proud boast of Harry Morton, alias Muldoon, aged crook, now in jail here.

Old man Morton admits he is the "oldest and best" safe cracker in the country.

It is a rather ironical fact that the man who is confident he can "crack any safe in the country" is doing time for forging several small checks.

"A man should stick to his own stuff," Morton said. "Why should an expert safe man like me monkey around with checks?"

Morton has done four "stretches" in penitentiaries. The first conviction came in 1876. About two months ago the aged criminal was released from his fourth prison term at the Leavenworth, Kan., Federal prison.

AMERICAN COTTON SAID TO BE OILY

Spinning Mills Complain Of Carelessness in Way It Is Handled

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Criticism of American cotton because of the presence of oil has been made to the Department of Agriculture by spinning mills, according to officials.

Asserting that carelessness in handling cotton bales and in oiling machinery probably was the source of the damage, a cotton specialist of the department said:

"Practices which result in damage to cotton will lead in time to the custom of assessing regular penalties against all cotton originating at the points from which shipments of such damaged cotton are made."

FRENCHMEN GO TO MUCH TROUBLE TO 'KID' THE ROAD DEPT.

PARIS, Sept. 19.—A Frenchman will do almost anything to dramatize a joke.

Paris streets are being badly torn up this summer. Among other excavations is one exceptionally deep on the Boulevard Haussmann, at the corner of the Rue Caumartin.

Two French Alpinists, who are incidentally newspaper writers, conceived the idea of going mountain climbing in this deep cleft, which they picturesquely dubbed "the gorges of Caumartin."

To conceive was to do. They obtained Alpine costumes, including the inevitable feather, bound themselves together with a thick rope, seized Alpine stocks, and proceeded to climb down into the "gorges."

Amazed crowds gathered and, when they understood, booed good naturedly. Nothing daunted, the "Alpinists" continued to the very bottom, walked on the floor of the pit, and ascended triumphantly.

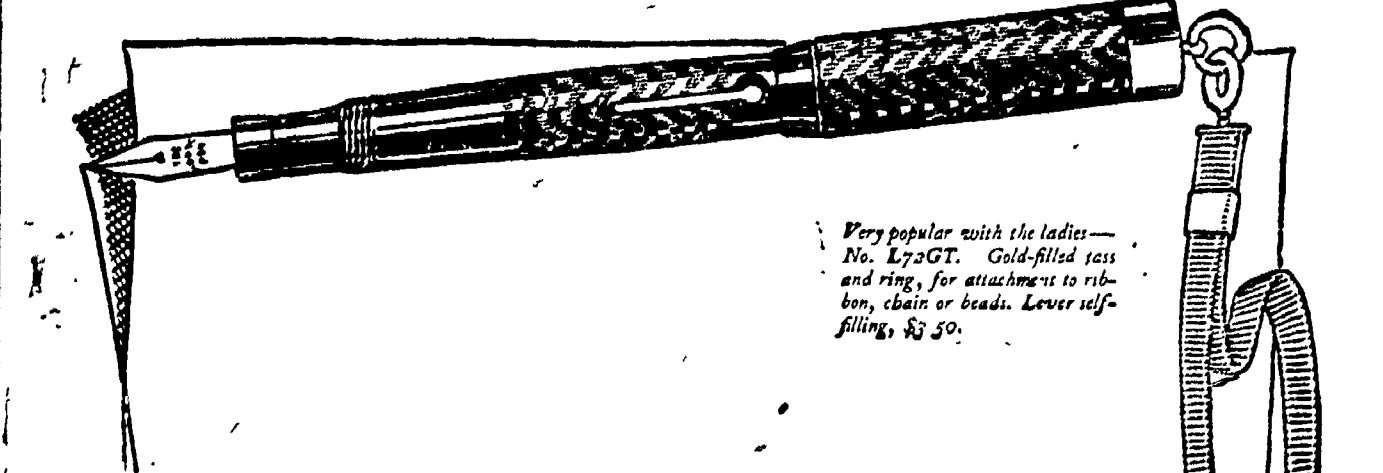

Currants Are Grown From New Cuttings

Currants are easily propagated in the home fruit garden from cuttings of the new wood if a few simple directions are followed as given by J. H. Gourley, horticulturist, Ohio Experiment Station.

Take cuttings of the currant 5 to 8 inches long in the early fall and set in rows or heel in together in a well drained spot until early spring. Less than an inch of the cutting should protrude above ground and this may be covered with a light mulch of manure to keep the cuttings from being leaved out and the roots broken by spring freezing.

Mr. Gourley suggests this simple method of planting. Make an opening in the ground with a spade, place a cutting behind the spade and press the ground with the foot in order to force the earth tightly against the plant.

The Wilder Red Cross Fair, London Market, and Perfection are recommended as the best varieties of currants.

TEACHING OF SEX HYGIENE IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS IS CONDEMNED

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 19.—The teaching of sex hygiene in the public schools of America is deplored by Dr. Richard C. Cabot, professor of medicine and social ethics at Harvard University, who was a Portland visitor.

It isn't knowledge, that keeps people "straight," according to this university authority.

"If it did," Dr. Cabot argued, "doctors and nurses would be the most exemplary people in the world—and we know they are not."

KNOWLEDGE NOT HELPFUL.

"The teaching of sex hygiene in the public schools is not helpful to the youth of the land, in my estimation," he declared. "In the first place, it centralizes the attention and the thought and the imagination on a thing that we do not want the thought centralized upon; hence its teaching is contradictory."

"Children develop along sex lines at widely divergent ages. What one child is ready for in the way of instruction the next one is not ready for, and to force knowledge upon a child who is not ready for it is a serious thing. Such knowledge should be imparted to individuals and not to groups."

"Besides knowledge is not the thing that keeps people straight. The example of people we care for is the thing that does that, hence the value of the right kind of companions for both children and adults."

FEWER MEDICAL SCHOOLS.

"The most hopeful sign in relation to medical education to-day is that schools of medicine are becoming fewer. In 1916 there were 160 schools in the country; now there are but eighty. Those who have closed their doors have been of the lower class operated for financial gain. Money cannot be made in teaching medicine. Any attempt to do so is fraudulent. Schools of medicine, to fill their real mission, must be carried on in conjunction with the large universities and colleges."

"The quality of the work done by doctors in the schools of medicine has increased as the number of schools has decreased. A better class of men is taking up the work of teaching."

Fire is still smoldering at Smyrna, according to the Evening News correspondent. Most of the murders at Smyrna were committed by low class civilians instead of by Turkish soldiers.

Actually "Sight Unseen." In Morocco youths and maidens are badly indeed, for they are not even allowed to see each other before the wedding. Now and again a venturesome youth will hide himself in the room when the young woman is coming to pay the customary state call upon his mother, but even this needs to be done with a considerable amount of caution.

Riot Gun Is Used to Quell Runaway Steer

WATERTOWN, Mass., Sept. 19.—Pedestrians along Main street, in this city, scattered to places of safety when a steer that had broken loose from the Brighton Stockyards galloped down the main highway.

Police were called, and an officer went after the animal with a riot gun. Three bullets ended the steer's wild career.

And, your good taste will prove that!

Kellogg's Corn Flakes ought to be superior—they are the original Corn Flakes! Kellogg's are never tough or leathery; never hard to eat; never a disappointment!

Be certain to get Kellogg's—the delicious kind of Corn Flakes in the RED and GREEN package—because none are genuine without the signature of W. K. Kellogg, the originator of Toasted Corn Flakes.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Transfer of the tariff making power from congress to a non-partisan tariff commission of nine members was proposed in a resolution introduced in the house today by Representative Ansgore, Republican of New York. Congress would retain its power of tariff policy control and would decide whether a protective or revenue tariff bill should be enacted, but the fixation of rates would be left to a commission of experts under the resolution.

6TH ST. THEATRE

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 20

The escape of Eliza stirs our sympathy as no ordinary melodrama ever can, and the fortunes of Uncle Tom keep us alert and excited. And the production which Newton & Livingston will bring to our city will be the same that has been so favorably received in New York City, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, St. Louis and all large cities.

"Under Hawaiian Skies," the story of mystery, is the latest play to be written dealing with these Islands of the Pacific. The greatest of all appeals is given this story, that of a great love, the producers, have given the play an Hawaiian atmosphere by a wonderful scenic equipment and also a band of native Hawaiian singers. In all the plays of last season, the Hawaiian play seemed to have the greatest appeal, for throughout the entire season, this play was greeted by wonderful audiences. The present season will no doubt see a number of plays founded on the Paradise of the Pacific. "Under Hawaiian Skies" is a massive scenic production, carrying a carload of their own special scenery, and will be seen at the 6th St. theatre, September 22.

COCOANUT OIL MAKES A SPLENDID SHAMPOO

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain multified coconut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanser the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get multified coconut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

REP. KELLER WILL PRESS IMPEACHMENT OF ATTY. GENERAL

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—The attempt to impeach Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty failed to make any material progress when the case was called for hearing by the house judiciary committee.

After some wrangling among the committee members the hearing was postponed until Tuesday morning to allow Representative Keller, Republican, of Minnesota, who began the impeachment proceedings, time to get his evidence together.

"I am prepared at the appropriate time to sustain every charge that I make," Keller told the committee. "I demand that when such evidence is presented, it shall be in public hearings so that the American people may know whether or not my charges were sustained."

The committee meeting developed into a political wrangle. Ben C. Marsh of the Farmer's National Association, a spectator, informed the committee that he had just toured eleven states and that the Daugherty trial would have a great effect on the political situations of those states.

"That lets the cat out of the bag," said Representative Yates, Republican, of Illinois. "This whole proceeding is one of politics."

"Looks like a Republican row to me," commented Representative Thomas, Democrat of Kentucky.

Keller took the position that the committee must hold his charges against the attorney general of sufficient gravity to warrant a searching probe by the committee into the acts and conduct of the attorney general.

"I contend that at this time it is the function of the committee," he said, "to determine only one point, namely, whether these charges which I present constitute offenses, if they are sustained by competent evidence."

"I demand that I be permitted to be represented by counsel, that all the facts may be fully developed and that this grave menace to the integrity of the administration of justice may be laid bare," Keller brot impeachment charges against Attorney General Daugherty in the house last Monday. He charged Daugherty with violations of the constitution, failure to bring prosecutions against the guilty ones, and misuse of public funds.

Citing his motives in bringing the charges, Keller denied personal hostility to Daugherty. "My purpose in seeking the impeachment of Attorney General Daugherty," he said "is laid solely upon my desire to see the laws of the nation enforced without fear and without favor and to preserve the dignity of the United States government."

LIVING COSTS ARE HIGHER THAN LAST YEAR BY NINE PCT.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—The cost of living in August 1922, was approximately nine per cent higher than it was in August 1921, according to comparative wholesale figures on 404 commodities, announced today by the department of labor.

The principal increases were noted in costs of fuel and lighting materials, which rose 47 1-4 per cent, building materials 10 1-4 per cent, metal products 7 3-4 per cent, farm products 6 1-2 per cent, clothing 5 3-4 per cent. Food items other than farm products, chemicals, drugs and house furnishings showed decreases.

During August of this year there were decreases of about 3 per cent in nearly all foodstuffs.

ALL OF INDICTED PEOPLE ARRESTED

For the first time in many years the county sheriff has been able to arrest all the men against whom grand jury indictments have been made, in time to arraign them during the same term of court in which they were indicted.

The last of the six men indicted by the grand jury last week was arrested Sunday when Sheriff Ernest Darr took Wilson Strouse of the Walbonding vicinity into custody on a charge of non-support.

He will probably be arraigned late Monday afternoon, it was announced at the courthouse.

Queer Legal Question Over $400 Overdraft

AKRON, Sept. 19.—A knotty legal tangle that may go to the State Supreme Court before final determination is disclosed in the trial here of E. H. Cunningham, of Cuyahoga Falls, on a charge of grand larceny.

The facts, according to the indictment, upon which he will be tried are that Cunningham carried an account with the Ohio State Bank and Trust Company, and that, upon inquiring his balance, was told that it was $414. He wrote a check and drew this amount. It is declared, however, that his actual balance was $14.

The defense asserts that Cunningham made no false statements and that the money was paid him voluntarily.

Rail Strike Has No Effect in Honolulu

HONOLULU, Sept. 19.—The Oahu Railway is unaffected by the nationwide railway strike now in effect. Its eighty-two miles of narrow-gauge track which form the complete railway system of the island of Oahu, Hawaii, are clear to the normal traffic of sugar cane, pineapples and tourists. The several hundred employees, and the miniature moguls which daily labor on island hauls, are blissfully content and unaffected by strike conditions or unsettlement.

POPE DEPARTS FROM OLD CUSTOMS, SAYS U. S. FULFILLED DUTY

ROME, Sept. 19.—Pope Pius XI has issued the following message to the American People:

"We love America. Humanity owes much to America. In the troublous times America did its full duty. We hope, pray and expect that in the future America will meet its responsibilities as nobly as in the past. Doing so, we could expect no more."

This message was given to John H. Perry, an American newspaper publisher in the course of a private audience at the Vatican.

Mr. Perry said that the pontiff appeared to be in perfect health. His face was radiant. The pontiff impressed the American editor as being more of an Irish American type than Italian. Mr. Perry was informed at the Vatican that the pope plans making excursions from the Vatican to lend the patronage of the holy father to the Rome churches. He desires direct contact with the people. For that purpose he has an automobile. Should the pontiff depart from the vatican it would break a precedent that has existed for half a century. Mr. Perry told how, previous to his audience, he had witnessed through an open door a remarkable scene. An aged priest, accompanied by four aged women of the peasant type, entered the presence of his holiness. The latter instantly recognized them as women from Milan—playmates of his youth and life long friends. He descended from the papal dais and, throwing off formality, laughingly hugged and kissed them all.

The audience of the women lasted several minutes, taking on the form of a kindly reunion. The pontiff then blessed his aged visitors who made their exit happily chatting among themselves in soft Italian.

NAVAL OFFICER DESCRIBES GREAT FIRE AT SMYRNA

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—The navy department today made public a belated despatch from Captain Arthur J. Hepburn, commanding American naval forces at Smyrna, in which he described the beginning of the fire which destroyed the city. Hepburn's message apparently was sent late on the afternoon of the 14th to the flagship Ulah and forwarded from there to Washington. The despatch follows:

"Fire started 1 P. M., 13th in Armenian quarter. European section of town almost completely destroyed. Consulate completely destroyed; codes, funds and important documents saved. Consul searching for temporary quarters. Fire still raging. All American born, accounted for. Streets are paraded by American and Turkish guards. Fourteen naturalized Americans are missing. All men-o-war in harbor are loaded with refugees. Edsall sailed 8 A. M. for Salonika with 600. Minona will sail 4 A. M. today for Piraeus carrying about 400 refugees, consisting of scholars and attendants of American business and consular organizations. Upon return of Edsall proposed to send Litchfield to Constantinople.

Police Summoned to Settle Lovers' Quarrel

MARTINS FERRY, Sept. 19.—Police here want it distinctly understood that they have troubles enough without settling lovers' quarrels. The edict is the outcome of a telephone call to headquarters telling of a big scrap. They refused, however, to take sides.

Old Party Bankruptcy

NOT two years have elapsed since Mr. Harding was elected president by the greatest vote ever cast by an American electorate. The prestige of the vote received by the Republican party was calculated to carry it far. The people were more than generous in their mandate to the new administration.

Yet were this England with by-elections showing the drift of public sentiment so decidedly against the party in power as the primaries here have shown in recent months, there would be an instant resignation of every responsible head of the administration. The prestige of the 1920 election is gone. The party then so spectacularly installed in power is in collapse with its responsible heads leaderless and their program repudiated in states overwhelmingly Republican.

The most significant fact about this collapse is that the Democratic party is in no position to take advantage of the discomfiture of its ancient foe. This fact is strikingly illustrated in the latest Republican defeat in Wisconsin by an avowed Republican who, from his place in the United States senate has bitterly opposed every measure of real importance that has borne the administration stamp.

The prostration of an old party machine and the intellectual bankruptcy of its leaders is always significant, but the situation today with both parties in the same mental plight as regards leadership is something new in American politics. It is true the Democratic party has the old "Solid South" to rely upon as a nucleus, but this sectional solidarity, so much relied upon by the Democrats is, if they but knew it, more of a liability to them than an asset.

But of one thing we may rest assured. The present moribund state of the two dominant parties cannot last long. If one or the other of them does not offer competent leadership within the next two years, there will be nothing that can prevent masses of voters from each organization breaking with their old alliances. The independent vote is even now a powerful factor in every state outside the solid south and if by 1924 a real line of cleavage is not determined between the old parties, the present unorganized mass of independent voters will select leaders of its own and assume responsibility for definite, concrete political action.

If in states like Iowa, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin a federal Republican administration cannot impose its will on primary elections then indeed have the leaders of the party fallen from the high estate they have occupied ver since the Civil war.

A Receivership For Germany

BUSINESS men are being treated with a little more respect than usual nowadays. The Soviet government in Russia has confessed that it cannot get along without their aid; Stinnes and De Lubersac have rushed politicians aside and made practical arrangements for getting German building materials into France; and America is now enjoying a national administration by men elected to give us "less politics in business and more business in politics." It is not surprising, therefore, to see a practical man of affairs come along and propose that the whole question of restoring Europe can readily be solved by the application of business principles.

A receivership for Germany is the basis of this proposal, made by Colonel Robert M. Thompson of the International Nickel Company, in the September issue of Our World. Germany, he says, is insolvent, and any attempt to force immediate payment of what she owes, thru a compulsory "sale of her assets," would be disastrous to debtor and creditor alike. Instead, a financially receiver must be named, who can find the capital and furnish the management necessary to carry on the business of the empire and make the necessary payments, while interfering as little as possible with the German people.

The United States, Colonel Thompson thinks, is the only country financially and economically able to undertake that receivership. His scheme, if it worked, would also solve the problem of the eleven billion dollar debt owed us by the Allies. We would cancel these obligations in exchange for an equivalent amount of the German obligation to our present debtors, the latter to "endorse Germany's notes," so to speak, guaranteeing ultimate payment to us if she defaulted. The balance of the reparations obligations would also be placed in our hands for collection in our capacity as receiver. We would take over the operation of Germany's affairs, distributing among the Allies whatever payments we secured, in proper proportion to the size of their share. All troops would be withdrawn from the occupied territory and a small American garrison substituted. German goods would be put on sale in the markets of the world, the places where they were offered and the prices being controlled by a committee to prevent the crowding out of French and English goods. Colonel Thompson thinks we might need to make a billion-dollar loan to France, but that the restoration of prosperity would make such a loan both simple and safe.

It is a grand plan, and theoretically there is no reason why it could not be used to restore Europe at once and completely. The only element Colonel Thompson has left out is the frailty and pride of human nature. The Germans would probably fight again even with their bare hands, before they would consent to the terrible humiliation of such a receivership. The French would march to Berlin sooner than depend on America for security against the dreaded foe—on that America which, so they believe, has already failed them once. The English would resist a scheme which gave the Yankees the position of moral leaders of the world, guardians of Europe.

Colonel Thompson may well say that his plan requires only that men be reasonable. But if men were reasonable we should never have war.

Paris Day-By-Day

By O. O. McIntyre

PARIS, Sept. 19.—The wicked night life of Paris flaunts its ballyhoo along the Boulevard des Capucines. Every few steps the leering face of a guide edges out of the shadows to inquire of the tourist: "A guide M'sieu? See the Mystery Dance, the Den of the Apache! Ver' wicked."

The guides are used to rebuffs. They are evidently detested by the worldly cosmopolite. When one approached an Englishman, he turned with, "A guide for what? Why you poor boulder, I've seen more of you than you will ever see." The guide merely shrugged and turned away.

WALT MASON

BUSY DAYS

The sexton views the rows of tombs with pride, because he planned them; he says, "These little quiet rooms! All sorts of folks demand them. Few wish to sleep beneath the grass in robes that have no pouches; and yet they will step on the gas, and I prepare their couches. One sees a railway train approach, the dust and gravel tossing, and he should halt his choo-choo coach, and not attempt the crossing; but foolishly he thinks to pass, and save a half a minute, and fiercely steps upon the gas—mark yonder grave; he's in it. One would enjoy an evening jaunt, a harmless sort of revel; he takes his wife and maiden aunt to hold the rear seat level. Another auto would pass by; it honks and seems to worry; and why not let it do so—why? He's in no earthly hurry. But he's a sport, and naught shall pass, no boat can beat his Lizzie; he steps down hard upon the gas—and so they keep me busy. One journey sadly while it rains, and sighs, 'I know I'd ought to, but how I hate to: put on chains! "Take chances" is my motto. I hate to kneel in dirty grass, in mud and slime to wallow, and so I'll feed the old bus gas—he rests in yonder hollow."

The sexton often sighs, "Alas! My lot is hard and dreary, but while the boys step on the gas there's no rest for the weary."

Peddling wickedness in Paris has its hardships. I was an easy catch. Having dined well I sought a little adventure and so I bargained to see the "Mystery Dance." It was under a cinema in the neighborhood and the man in the seat adjoining said he came from Red Wing, Minn.

The dance was merely a vulgar anatomical display which one sees on any circus lot. It is "the feeder." At its finish the announcer tells in whispers of Broken English of the Apache which opens at midnight in the Montmartre.

This proved similar to the New York Chinatown opium dens for those who ride the rubber-neck wagons. The den was in a cellar. It was a staged affair with hired men and women dancing Apache dances. The peace of resistance was the appearance of the Queen of the Paris Underworld.

She entered with a lowering of lights and appeared a trifle bored by it all. It was late and no doubt she would have a lot of breakfast dishes to do when she got back to her job in someone's kitchen in the morning.

For those who wished to remain at 50 francs a head it was announced that five o'clock "the dawn solace" would be presented at a place on the banks of the Seine. This was to be the last word in wickedness. I didn't stay but the man from Red Wing did. He said as long as he had lived in Red Wing he had never seen such wickedness. And that I think aptly describes the wicked night life of Paris for the tourist.

Every Tuesday on the Place de la Madeleine the public flower market is held. Beautiful bunches of flowers are sold for 50 centimes—about a nickel. The love of the Parisian for flowers is displayed. The poor come from all sections to wait for the close of the market when the flowers that are left are given away. One often sees street sweepers with flowers in their coat lapels. Children carry them tenderly until they are entirely wilted.

The three best high-priced cafes in Paris, to my notion are, in their order named, Ciro's, the Cafe de Paris and Chateaux de Madrid. The most interesting dinner, however, is served at a little place on the left bank of the Seine along the rue des Medias. It is a goose dinner. The goose is choked to death to retain all the blood, plucked and then cooked before the patron on a revolving table pit. There is a sauce for the goose that is named after the wife of an American doctor who did heroic work for the wounded soldiers during the war.

In a kodak shop in the Place Vendome all the salesgirls are American. They came over to do war work and have cast their lot with the Parisians. None has been home in six years and all are to marry Frenchmen. "Paris gets in the blood," one told me. "After a few years one cannot be happy elsewhere."

Fire of an unknown origin, destroyed a barn and damaged several out-buildings on the farm of Irwin Rice, near the Isleta vicinity, at an early hour Tuesday morning.

Officers of the Coshocton high school football team were elected last evening. William Knight was elected president, Benton Clark, secretary and Russell, Speckman treasurer.

Joseph Swigert, local barber, broke his left shoulder in a fall at his home early Tuesday morning.

SIXTEEN KILLED IN FIGHTING OF IRISH

BELFAST, Sept. 19.—Ten irregular and six Free State troops were killed in battle at Erris County Mayo, early today. The fight raged for hours in the hills with the combatants fighting from behind rocks and trees. Irish fashion. Regulars raided Boyle, killing three Free Staters. One irregular was killed. Irregulars have captured Balla and Rath Keale. The courthouse at the latter place was set on fire. One member of the Free State garrison was killed.

Spot Is Marked Where Indians Spared Trader

URBANA, Sept. 19.—Wapatomica, the site of an old Indian village, where Simon Girty, the "white savage," rescued Simon Kenton, under sentence of death and about to be burned at the stake by Indians many years ago, has been permanently marked by a flag pole from which floats "Old Glory."

Girty, who lived among the Indians practically his entire life, made an eloquent plea to save the life of the white trader, which so impressed the savages that they gave Kenton an escort to Sandusky, from which point he reached the civilization of his day at Detroit, then little more than a fort and trading post.

BRITAIN, DESERTED

warning the government not to engage in war against Turkey.
"War can only come if we show ourselves weak and undecided," said the Daily Express. The Chronicle, organ of Premier Lloyd George, attacks that section of the press which is "tempting to divide the nation."
"The British attitude is plainly defensive," said the Chronicle. The Daily News commented: "The policy of holding Kemal's army at the straits is sound and pacific, but the manner of doing it should be pacific also."

The Daily Mail again attacked Premier Lloyd George and his policy, urging that parliament be summoned to make the British policy. This paper demanded an end of the British Turkish quarrel and the withdrawal of Premier Lloyd George.

The Times advocated "a sound non-provocative policy." "It shall not be," declared the Daily Herald, in speaking of war. The British Mediterranean fleet at the Dardanelles now consists of the following units:
One battle squadron.
One light cruiser squadron.
Two destroyer flotillas.
Two aircraft carriers.
Another destroyer flotilla has arrived at Gibraltar.

It may have been the arrival of these small craft which led to the rumor that the Atlantic fleet was going into the Mediterranean to join the British Mediterranean fleet.

Reported but without official confirmation by the foreign office that a note has been received here from the Ankara government promising that Turkish Nationalist troops will not try to enter zones occupied by allied forces, but claiming the right to occupy territory hitherto held by the Greeks. This includes Chanak, where British troops are now entrenched. The Turks promised not to attack Constantinople or Thracian European territory.

An official communication was issued at 10 Downing-st. saying that the statement on British policy in the Near East as issued Saturday was correct. It had been announced Monday that the Saturday statement "did not represent the united view of the cabinet but was the work of two or three ministers."

The Saturday statement had declared that Britain was prepared to fight to maintain the neutrality of the Dardanelles, Sea of Marmora and Bosphorus. The announcement is viewed today in a new light, however. That is to say that Britain will not declare war if fighting in the Near East breaks out it must result from an attack upon the British by the Turks.

VETO MESSAGE

A careful poll of the existing situation in house and senate by the International News Service indicated today that the house will override the veto and repass the bill, but that the senate will sustain the veto—thus effectually killing the measure so far as the 67th congress is concerned. With a full senate of 96 members and voting the presidential veto might be overridden, but there are approximately two dozen senators absent from Washington and they are nearly all members pledged to the bonus.

The anti-bonus forces are nearly intact. By a peculiar twist of circumstances, it probably will be Democratic votes that will enable President Harding's veto to stand in the senate. There are eight Democrats against the bill and of this number seven are present in Washington and are considered as certain to uphold the veto, thus providing the necessary margin.

There will be at least thirty anti-bonus votes present and voting on the floor when the test comes, it appeared today, as compared with about 45 to 50 pro-bonus votes. Senatorial junketing and senatorial campaigning has taken a heavy toll from the pro-bonus ranks. Four bonus senators are in Europe—Caraway, of Arkansas, Harris, of Georgia, Ladd, of North Dakota, and Spencer, of Missouri. Others are campaigning: Johnson, of California, Poindexter, of Washington, Jones, of New Mexico, Kendrick, of Wyoming, Reed, of Missouri, while a number of others are sick or are away on personal business.

AGED MOTHER

son, which was made today by William Wallace Chisolm, of counsel for the accused, indicates the extent to which defense attorneys are relying upon "the mother element" in planning their case. The deep anxiety of Mrs. Bryson over the fate of her son is shared by Mrs. L. Randall, a daughter, who also is here to attend the trial, but who probably will not be called upon to testify. The only member of the family who appeared to be free from anxiety was Dr. Bryson himself.

Ever since he was lodged in jail, following the death of pretty Mrs. Haynes, wife of a Washington chauffeur, who died from bullet wounds and on her death bed accused Dr. Bryson of her murder, the accused doctor has manifested the greatest unconcern of his fate. He has not discussed his case with a single person, according to Attorney Chisolm, and has shown vastly more interest in the latest popular expedition than he has in the possibility that he may be sent to the electric chair.

Bryson has spent his time in jail reading detective stories and smoking cigarettes. He has maintained an air of absolute detachment and those who have watched his conduct closely are convinced that he is sincerely unconcerned about his fate.

Shall shock will be set up for the first time as a defense in a criminal trial. Several noted alienists will be summoned to testify. Dr. Bryson is 41 years old and was a former practicing physician of Washington. During the war he served as a medical officer overseas and there sustained the shell shock which is now his defense. After his return from the world war, he resumed practice at Cassville, far back in the mountains of Huntingdonshire. It was to Cassville he brought Mrs. Haynes from Washington and began the life of clandestine love that led to the tragedy.

Atlanta Cops Peeved at Impatient Autoists

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 19.—Who's running the traffic, anyway? That's what Atlanta Cops—long annoyed at the practice of motorists of honking their horns while in a line of traffic as a warning to the traffic officer that they are ready to go—would like to know.
They went to Councilman Bob Gordon about it, and Bob said he'd see about it. He introduced an ordinance making it a nuisance for autoists to so conduct themselves.

MY MARRIAGE PROBLEMS

Adele Garrison's New Phase of

Revelations of a Wife

Copyright, 1922, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

How Madge Won a Free Path Down the Road.

I HAVE heard of drowning people living a lifetime in a minute, but I never want to come nearer the experience than the emotions which swept me when I saw the car which I had eluded swing across the cross-road and block my path.

If I kept on in the road, I would hit the other machine squarely, with almost certain death as the result. Yet it was unthinkable to stop, especially as the men in the other car, who with the pertinacity of intoxication still held their anger against me because of my refusal to stop when they had signalled me, jumped from the car as it stopped and spread themselves out along the road, whooping and yelling in irresponsible drunken glee at the coup they had accomplished.

If only the fences had been down, as they often are in the country, I would have had a chance then of turning out to one side or the other and bump over the ruts of the potato fields. But stout wire fences guarded both roads on both sides, and to make matters worse, both roads were unusually narrow.

When I had first caught sight of the car as it stopped, it seemed to fill the road from one side to the other. But as I neared it I saw that the drunken men had miscalculated, and that on one side between the car and the fence there was a narrow strip of ground. It was a feat at which an expert driver might have balked, so uneven was the ground, so close the margin of width between the fence and the other car. But I could not be worse off than I was, and with a desperate little prayer I swerved my car just as I reached the other machine and I went crashing and swaying and bumping down a space through which my soberer judgment would have said a much smaller car than Dicky's could never pass.

A Miraculous Escape.

One running-board scraped the wire of the fence, the other caught a front fender of the big car and tore it loose. Taken by surprise, the men who had spread out to intercept me tried to get out of the way, but I felt the car jolt twice against something which I knew was not earth or wood, and a chorus of screams and oaths following my progress told me that I had inflicted more punishment than I had received.

And then I was clear, miraculously unhurt, and with the car still running.

I was conscious of several strange noises connected with the mechanism, and I guessed that the local garage would have a job the next day. But at every turn of the wheels it was carrying me farther and farther from the sinister menace behind me. And with a queer little tug of affection such as one might feel for a faithful horse, I patted the steering wheel absently, murmuring foolishly, "Good old fellow."

"Did You Get It?"

The question of the gas troubled me, but I resolved to put the greatest space possible between myself and the drunken men before stopping. I was sure that one at least of their number had been struck, and guessed that they would be delayed in starting again. And perhaps fate would relent and permit me to get home on the reserve gas.

It was with a feeling of worshipful gratitude that I finally drove the car into our own yard, and ran into the house with the precious drug from the hospital clutched tightly in my hand.

The scene downstairs was unchanged, save for the presence of Dr. Pettit, who evidently had been hearing an account of the affair from Lillian Smith, still bound, lay in the corner of the room, only his malevolent eyes showing that he was anything but an inert bundle of clothing.

Dr. Pettit's face held more than his usual professional gravity, as he advanced toward me, and I knew that Tom Chester was in grave danger from the tense eagerness with which he asked:

"Did you get it?"

For answer I laid the package in his hands. He seized it eagerly, tore the wrappings off while Lillian gave me a low-toned explanation of the reason for his gravity.

"I couldn't remember the spelling, and he couldn't make anything of Smith's scribbled words."

Dr. Pettit looked up blankly as he finally got the package open.

"I don't know what this is," he said honestly.

Advice to Girls

By ANNIE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a woman 26 years of age. I was married when I was only 16 years old, because my parents thought it was all right. My husband was 20 years old at that time. We will have been married 10 years this fall. I have had four little boys and lost them all but one.

My husband does not seem to care for us any more.

We have a nice little home which is not quite paid for.

Kindly advise me what to do about this matter, as I love my husband and want to be happy to the end of my life on account of the child.

WORRIED MOTHER.

WORRIED MOTHER: Try to keep your home together, and make it as pleasant as possible for the sake of your son. He will need his father more as he grows older. Have a heart-to-heart talk with your husband and tell him that both of you must do your best to be happy for the sake of your family. If you are always patient and kind he will see how sweet and womanly you really are and treat you more kindly in the future.

Annie Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. Letters to Miss Laurie should be addressed to her, in care of this office.

FEMINISMS

WHY SHE LEFT HOME

MRS. JUST MARRIED (greatly distressed)—I didn't mind that Jack always complained about the coffee I made. But it was the last straw when he wouldn't let me send to Paris for one of those ducky tight-fitting hats of metallic brocade to wear in the theatre. They're all the rage there. But Jack said the managers wouldn't stand for them here—think of him siding with them against me!

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES ABOUT His Official Boss

Copyright, 1922, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

THERE he stood at the big luncheon the other day, the man of affairs, keen, practical, practiced, and when he introduced the speaker of the day, he announced that he was introducing his official boss.

And the women in the crowded room smiled and applauded, and the "Official Boss" rose, cool, composed, charming, and made a very good speech, indeed, and we all congratulated her and ourselves, and everything was lovely.

But one of the women said to me on the way out: "What a wonderful man John Williams is, to stand right up and admit that a woman is his superior officer—and he acted as if he were glad of it. Do you think he really was?"

A Matter of Training

And I told the woman that I thought he really was, and that I didn't see anything so wonderful about it.

Of course, if he had been a little man he wouldn't have done it. I knew a man once who said he never felt as if he really knew another man until he heard what the other had to say about women, and saw the way he acted toward children.

I wonder if it is hard for the average man to admit that "any woman on earth" can be as intelligent as he is.

Are women really more generous, broader-minded and less corrected than men, or have they just been trained by the centuries till they know how to pretend that they are?

Have you never seen a clever, resolute, broad-minded, high-souled woman stooping and pretending to be lame so that she wouldn't embarrass her little stoop-shouldered, narrow-minded, stupid husband by looking taller and stronger than he?

Have you never observed a man doing the same thing—well, not exactly the same, but something a good deal like it? Don't you know a man somewhere who bears with his wife's ill-temper and her extravagance, and her petty vanity and her cold-blooded extortion, and pretends that he likes her—clear to the end of his days?

I do—I know a dozen such men.

Of course, it is largely a matter of training—largely a matter of tradition. Nobody likes a woman who's always trying to assert herself. Nobody can bear a woman who won't try to shield her husband or her father or her brother from the consequences of his own short-sighted folly. And the little man, the vain man, the man who isn't much of a success in his own particular line does always seem to resent a woman who is not little and not vain and not a failure.

What Do You Think?

There's nothing strange about that. "In the country of the blind," they say, "the one-eyed man is king." No wonder the one-eyed man loves to have the blind surrounding him.

Clever men, successful men, real men of real affairs don't have to surround themselves with sycophants or with parasites or even with humble dependents, to feel at ease.

Andrew Carnegie told me once in an interview that he never saw a man yet as bright as the brightest woman, he knew, and I saw Carnegie's stenographer wince and make a wry face when he took down the statement.

No! I don't think it was wonderful for John T. Williams to stand up in a public gathering and announce, with a good-humored smile, that the woman speaker of the day was his "Official Boss."

I think it was clever of him and politic. And I think, also, that when he did it, he did what any broad-gauge man would have done, and what any little-minded, strutting popinjay of a nobody would have died rather than do.

What do you think about it?

HOME-MAKING HELPS

"Everything About the House Helps to Make the Home"

By WANDA BARTON

Are You Planning to Replenish Your Supply of Different Towels?

REPLENISHING the stock of family towels is a fall and spring duty in almost all households, and since linen has been scarce it has not been a very satisfactory undertaking. This fall, however, there are coming in more from European centers, and so the much-needed cotton fabrics and make-shift materials we have been using are less often a part of household supplies.

Household linen has long been the favorite of the housekeeper. Traditionally, it has been the most durable, most beautiful towels with damask borders figure largely in purchases of household linen, though there are still some women old-fashioned enough to insist upon buying linen by the piece as making their own towels. There is an advantage in the fact that they may be made longer and wider than those that come ready-made, and may be hemmed any width by hand and finished with a neat work and inside, or embroidered with quaint cross-stitch work.

Great towels are made up in sets of a dozen for each room, and are usually folded in narrow bands and hung in the bathroom, the kitchen, and the linen closet. They are made to match the big towels, and are a season's purchase. They are made in a variety of sizes, and are usually made in sets of a dozen for each room. What You Can Do to Aid In a Uraemic Poisoning Case

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
Commissioner of Health, New York City

YESTERDAY I started to write an article on uraemic poisoning, and landed right in the middle of hope. I wonder if I can do better today.

The kidneys carry away an enormous amount of the body waste. Their function must be uninterrupted or trouble results. You see, the waste products are very poisonous. If some of the chemicals which are generated within the body and expelled as waste were recovered and injected into the blood, death might occur at once.

Because these waste products are so poisonous and because there is room in the body to store up material which is supposed to be eliminated daily and hourly, there must be no interference with their escape.

Sometimes there is discovered a state of "renal insufficiency." This is merely the scientific term to describe the failure of the kidneys to operate fully and completely. They do not carry off the waste turned over to them for disposal. Then the poisons are absorbed into the blood and the body suffers.

At first there is a mild toxemia—this means there is just a little poisonous effect. Usually, the first symptom of kidney trouble is headache. You should find out why you have a lot of headaches. There is always a reason, and sometimes failure of kidney action is the cause.

Attacks of sleepiness or of dizziness may come for the same reason. Sudden attacks of dimness of vision or even temporary loss of sight occur.

Nausea, vomiting and diarrhoea are other signs. The retained poisons may irritate the skin and cause severe itching.

Recurring cramps in the calves of the legs may come from the retained poisons and their effects on the nerves.

Difficult breathing and twitching of the muscles are other signs.

In severe cases there are convulsions, delirium, mania, actual insanity, and, finally, coma and death.

Needless to say, uraemic poisoning—as this condition is called—demands accurate and immediate treatment. The milder symptoms, due to partial retention of waste material, may pass away of themselves, but the severe cases require energetic attention.

The doctor will be called. While waiting for him, get the patient into a bath and bring about sweating. Make the skin so wet that the kidneys are failing to do.

In the country, hot blebs covered with wet towels may be packed around the patient, taking extreme care not to burn him. Hot packs made of field corn are excellent. Drop a dozen big ears of corn into a wash boiler of boiling water. Take them out, eat a time, and wrap four fresh ones around the patient. He will break out in profuse perspiration very quickly. Be careful not to burn him. If he is unconscious he can't tell you he is being burned.

When the patient wakes up he will tell you what more you can do to aid.

Answers to Health Questions

A DAILY READER Q—Do you think a scar caused by a severe cut can be removed, and if so, how?

A—Very little can be done to remove scars that are deep. However, you might consult a skin specialist for an examination and advice. In some cases X-ray treatment has proved beneficial.

C M T Q—Will you kindly tell me how I can rid the body of parasites?

A—Scrub the affected part well with green soap and hot water using a stiff brush. Once or twice a day apply sulphur ointment. The bedding and towels should be boiled after using as this is an infectious condition.

W H L Q—When I awaken in the mornings I am as tired as when I go to sleep at night. What do you think causes this condition?

A—This may be due to the fact that you do not sleep in a well-ventilated room. Make sure that your sleeping room is well ventilated, and see if this does not improve your condition.

MRS J. C. Q—I am troubled with dizziness and indigestion. What would you advise me to do?

A—The dizziness is probably due to the indigestion. If you will restate your question and enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope, full particulars on the treatment of this condition will be furnished.

Dr. Copeland will answer for readers of this paper questions on medical, hygienic and sanitation subjects that are of general interest. Where the subject of a letter is such that it cannot be published in this column, Dr. Copeland will, when the question is a proper one, write you personally, if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is enclosed. HEROINES OF HISTORY

Significant Incidents in the Lives of Famous Women

By MARK STUYVESANT

Why Esther Has Been Honored Over Twenty-three Centuries.

ONE of the best loved heroines of all time is Queen Esther, whose story is told in the Bible.

Esther was an orphan girl. She was brought up by her cousin, Mordecai, a Jewish man of Babylon. He adopted her as his own daughter, and loved her dearly.

Esther was very beautiful, and when one day King Ahasuerus of Susa saw her while driving along a country road, he fell madly in love with her. Esther loved the king in return, and they were married in 303 B. C.

Mordecai urged the marriage, but he had counseled Esther not to let King Ahasuerus know that she was a Jew. She did so, and he lived in Susa that he might secretly see his adopted daughter once in a while.

Queen Esther and the King were living together happily when an incident occurred which drew the memory fresh today in the minds of millions who are scattered all over the world.

Haman, an Amalekite, was the favorite of King Ahasuerus. One day when Mordecai was waiting at the gate to see Queen Esther, Haman passed, and Mordecai did not bow to him. This so enraged Haman that he determined to make Mordecai pay for his affront.

Going to the King, Haman told such falsehoods concerning the Jews that King Ahasuerus gave a command that not only Mordecai be put to death, but that all the Jews throughout the wide domain should die.

When Queen Esther heard of the injustice she was heart-sick. She knew that she must confess to her husband that she was a Jewess and risk not only losing the love of her husband, but her life if he would save her people. However, she did not flinch, and, going to the king, she pleaded for the Jews, and so saved them from the fate which Mordecai had feared. Queen Esther's story is a story of courage and faith, and it is one that has inspired millions of people throughout the centuries.

THE only drawback about accepting nice invitations is the scramble for clothes that follows," said Pam, dropping into a chair with an exhausted expression.

"Now, don't crab—you know you are crazy to go to that dance tonight," I said in a soothing tone.

"Of course I am," she agreed, promptly. "Harry is such a little more previous with his invitations. The idea of waiting till the eleventh hour!"

"Perhaps it just occurred to him," I suggested.

"That's just it. I'd like to stay away and fool him, only it is delightful to do things on the spur of the moment." She accompanied the latter idea with a smile of anticipation.

"Then, what's your objection?" I asked.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Flames which broke out at the Country Life Press, the publishing house of Doubleday, Page & Co., Garden City, Long Island, were extinguished by firemen in tuxedos, full evening clothes and in white flannels. Suffering from Lime-Starvation?

Dr. Sherman of Columbia University says that half the American people are suffering from lime-starvation. This explains the decay of teeth and lack of pep. The fault lies in our eating. We "fill up" on foods that fool us—foods that are denatured and almost wholly lacking in the very elements the body requires—lime for the bones and muscles, iron for the blood and vitamin B which every tissue needs. No wonder most of us are only half alive!

If you want to know what a difference complete food makes, just try eating "ZEP" for a week. "ZEP" is something new and delicious in breakfast foods—a complete food in that it supplies the essentials to health and vitality—vitamin B, food iron, and food lime. And delicious? Man, you never sat down to a more enjoyable dish. Ready to serve—with cream, milk or fruit juice.

School Enrollment At Newcomerstown Shows Slight Slump

The Newcomerstown public schools opened Monday with an enrollment of 759 pupils, 11 less than last year at the opening.

In the high school there are 157 pupils, an increase of 11 pupils over the high school enrollment last year at the close of school. The senior class this year is the largest in the history of the schools. Twenty-eight were graduated last year.

There are at present 604 pupils in the grades with present indications pointing to a much larger enrollment in the grades before the close of school.

Prof. Hays of the Newcomerstown public schools told the Tribune reporter Monday night that was proud of his school because the pupils take exceptional interest in their daily routine.

The pupils are attending school in four buildings. They are the east and west buildings, the K. of P. hall and the Woods building.

The faculty includes 23 teachers, five of whom are teachers in the high school. According to a statement by Prof. Hays, it will be necessary to add another teacher to the high school within the next few days. A teacher will be hired to teach English.

The two school buildings are at present undergoing repairs, such as the installation of more toilets and other fixtures. The repairs are expected to be completed in a few days.

Following is the enrollment by grade, including the high school—1st, 77; 2nd 79; 3rd 82; 4th 93; 5th 70; 6th 69; 7th 72; 8th 62; Freshmen 60; Sophomore 54; Juniors 34 and Seniors 37 with another pupil in the near future.

Style Show Draws Huge Dance Crowd

The fall style show, conducted by David Davidoff, manager of the Baltimore Clothing store at Newcomerstown and the Gem at Coshocton, and the opening dance of the dancing season in Newcomerstown, held in the Lydick building were huge successes Monday night.

Approximately 250 people attended the style show and dance. At least thirty-five of that number were from Coshocton. Several were from Uhrichsville, Dennison, New Philadelphia and Dover.

The affair was given under the auspices of V. S. Scott and Lloyd Ley, of Newcomerstown. Six living models displaying Dame Fashion's creations completed the style show. The girls are from Newcomerstown. They are the Misses Mary Mulvane, Etta Taylor, Nellie Daniels, Helen Gefeller, Ruth Davis and Henrietta Vogenitz. The young ladies appeared on the dance floor in the beautiful fall gowns under spotlight. While the girls displayed the gowns, the orchestra played continuously for an hour, the length of the show. The girls appeared in the latest fall garments.

Miss Gefeller first appeared in a gown of crepe Romaine with a long basque effect with beautifully beaded panels. Next came Miss Mulvane in a Navy blue velvet Delaine, heavily embroidered with natural squirrel trimmings.

Following this display by Miss Mulvane, Miss Daniels made her appearance in a handsomely draped Navy blue Point till street dress. It was an attractive showing. Miss Vogenitz appeared, wearing a coat of black bouclé trimmed with embroidery. Embroidery was also on the sleeve sleeves. On the collar was a handsome set of black fur.

Miss Taylor featured a beautiful dress of crepe back satin with the long draped panels bearing elaborate hand made ornaments. Miss Davis was attractive in a splendid looking sport coat with gray cloth along with an elaborate brush wool sporting scarf and hat.

Each garment shown was tastefully matched with the newest ideas in fall millinery supplied by Mrs. Carr of the Carr Millinery Co., of Newcomerstown. The gowns worn were from the collections at the Baltimore Clothing Store.

Following the style show the dance was begun. Several patrons came especially to see the display of gowns. There were a number of spectators at the pavilion. The dancing began at 8 o'clock and lasted until 12.

The music was furnished by the Duffy Armstrong orchestra. The music was appealing and appropriate for last evening's occasion. The dance patrons were well pleased with the variety of musical selections. The dance hall, known as the Ca-

Before I finished I was able to work nine hours a day in a steam laundry. I cannot say too much in favor of your medicine. I trust all sick and suffering women will take it. "Dumb" Is Correct!
Begs Orally for Aid

WEBSTER, Mass., Sept. 19—A familiar "deaf and dumb" beggar in this town found his voice and fled.

The beggar, who had been doing a fine business here, with a sign placed on his breast reading, "I am Deaf and Dumb," was either visited by a miracle or attacked with absent-mindedness, when he asked one of the citizens to give him money to help his widowed mother. The citizen motioned for a policeman. The beggar beat a hasty retreat.

WET AMENDMENT ORDERED TO BE PUT TO VOTERS

Supreme Court Votes 5 To 2 For Placing Proposal On Ballots

COLUMBUS, Sept. 19.—By a vote of 5 to 2, the state supreme court today ordered Secretary of State Smith to place the beer-light wine proposal on the November election ballot.

Overruling the demurrer of Attorney General Price who had asked the court to dismiss the case on the ground of insufficient facts, the judges complied with the request of supporters of the proposal for a writ of mandamus ordering the secretary of state to place the proposed amendment on the ballot.

Judges Jones, Wanamaker, Clark, Mathias and Robinson, are said to have ordered the proposal placed on the ballot. Justice Marshall is, it is stated, cast the lone dissenting vote. Justice Hough not voting. Dry officials have announced their intention of appealing to the United States Supreme court. Wet leaders, however, voiced confidence that the federal court will not interfere with the placing of the proposal on the Ohio ballots this fall. It is claimed that the proposal, which provides for the manufacture and sale of 2.75 beer and light wines, conflicts with the 18th amendment to the federal constitution and the Volstead law.

Secretary of State Smith recently ruled that the proposal should not go on the November ballot. Appealing to the state supreme court, supporters of the proposal argued that Secretary Smith exceeded his powers, that the question of constitutionality of such a proposal should be determined by the courts and then only after the proposal has been submitted to Ohio voters at the November election.

MALONE WALLOPS BRYAN DOWNEY IN COLUMBUS MATCH

COLUMBUS, Sept. 19.—With ease Jack Malone, St. Paul, middleweight boxer, defeated Bryan Downey, Columbus, in a 12-round bout here last night. Fumes from liniment on Downey's body, it is claimed interfered with Malone's sight during the last two rounds.

The local boxing commission has been asked to probe the matter and to question Downey's manager, Jimmy Dunn. It is charged that Dunn had a bottle holding liniment and that traces of liniment were found on a towel used by Downey. Downey had the edge in the first four rounds. Malone, however, took the lead in the fifth and outpointed Downey, throughout the rest of the fight. There was much clinching.

Hard body punches by Malone seemed to wear Downey down. After the fourth round Downey appeared unable to land any telling punches on Malone's head, most of his blows landing on Malone's back.

Believes Coxe Is Tool Of Opponents Of Sen. Pomerene

Is "General" Jacob Sechler Coxe, now in the field as an independent candidate for U. S. senator from Ohio, being hired by a clique of "old guard" politicians who are desirous of defeating Senator Altee Pomerene?

This interesting angle on Ohio's three-cornered senator fight was advanced here today by a well-known Millersburg man.

According to this politician, Coxe addressed a picnic at New Castle in Coshocton Saturday.

The "general's" address, he said, was largely an "attack on Pomerene."
